ABSTRACT

This directory lists and describes 7,186 currently active organizations that were established by minority group members or which operate programs for the benefit of minority groups. (An additional 1,358 entries for "lost" or inactive organizations are also included.) For purposes of the directory, minority groups are defined as including Native Americans (both Alaska Natives and American Indians), and Black, Hispanic, and Asian Americans. Preceding the organizational listings is a brief discussion of the historical role of minority organizations in the United States. The main section of the directory provides each organization's current address, as well as a brief statement as to its purpose and/or activities. In addition to this section, several aids are provided: an alphabetical index, a geographical index, an index by racial/ethnic group, an index by organization function, a glossary, and sources of information for the directory. A tear-out data request form for updating future editions of the directory is attached. (GC)

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Any project of this scope involves the efforts of hundreds of people. A number of national and regional sources helped identify eligible organizations. Others provided information to enter, or update, their organization's file.

Many worked on the job of contacting, following up, editing, and preparing final copy including Dorothy Corcoran, Sally Bush, Sandra Bayne, Paula and Marc Rehn, Carolyn Cornett, and Laura Kasunic. The minority organization directory file project began in 1970 and culminated in the first edition which came out in 1978. Thus, the process of developing the list of minority groups contained in this directory has taken place over a dozen years.

The final copy was reproduced by Ellen Hicks.

The cover design was by Catherine Van Arsdale and graphics by Stan Hitt Graphics.

The cooperation provided by these many individuals and organizations must be acknowledged, with deep thanks.

INTRODUCTION: ORGANIZATION AND DEVELOPMENT OF THE DIRECTORY

This directory seeks to fill a major national void by providing a comprehensive listing of organizations established by minority group members or which operate programs for the benefit of minority groups.

For the purposes of this directory, minority groups are defined to include Native Americans (both Alaska Natives and American Indians), Black, Hispanic, and Asian Americans.[1] These are the groups which, historically, have been discriminated against in employment, education, housing, and other civil liberties. Definitions of these groups appear in the Glossary.

In addition to the main directory section, several aids are provided to help the user.

Alphabetical index. This index appears at the beginning of the book and also serves as a general table of contents. As will be repeated several times, the numbers used are organizational entry numbers, not page numbers. This index includes cross-references, where groups have changed titles recently or lists titles in more than one language.

Geographical index. This index appears toward the end of the book and for the various states or other areas lists the entry number of organizations located in them.

Racial-Ethnic Group index. This index appears toward the end of the book and provides reference to the minority group served or holding membership in an organization.

Functional index. This index appears toward the end of the book and cites types of program activities for the listed organizations.

Glossary. This list of key terms, including frequently cited Spanish words, appears toward the end of the book.

Sources of Information for the Directory. This appears toward the end of the book and cites books and directories, telephone books, and periodicals which were regularly checked to help develop the master file of minority organizations to be contacted.

Overall, this second edition lists 7,186 minority organizations, two-and-a-half times as many as the 2,705 cited in the first edition. Their orientation or service areas are as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| 103 | Alaska Native-oriented |
| 1,539 | American Indian-oriented |
| 925 | Asian American-oriented |
| 1,115 | Black-oriented |
| 1,561 | Hispanic-oriented |
| 1,943 | Generally minority-oriented or serving more than one group |

In addition to these 7,186 organizational entries, another 1,358 entries for "lost" organizations or groups which are known to have ceased operation are included. Finally, another 153 entries cross-reference organizations, often reflecting a change of name from the prior edition of the directory.

A number of points should be called to the attention to users of the directory.

1. Where an organization has a number of chapters or affiliated groups, they are generally listed under the main heading for the group.

2. Many times, an organization is known by two titles or by an abbreviation of its name. Also, many groups use both an English and a non-English title. Where this is true, both titles may be cited in the Alphabetical Index. The main directory entry uses the one cited first by the group. For example, the Spanish Catholic Center is listed that way, with a cross reference to its Spanish name, Centro Catolico Hispano.

3. The directory listing includes the names of a number of organizations for which current information could not be located. Most are probably defunct. Others may have moved or changed their addresses or names. In every case, all possible resources were used to try to track down these organizations. Many of these groups were cited, by their last officers or executives, as being closed.

   These organizations were, however, listed in this directory (with a brief notation that no current information is available) for two reasons. First, many of these names appear in other old lists. Unless they were cited, some readers might question the completeness of a directory which omits organizations noted elsewhere. Secondly, some of them may be only temporarily inactive and could be reorganized and activated. This might happen, for example, to the American Indian Press Association--inactive at the time of this writing.

[1] In this directory, Black is spelled with a capital "B" on the grounds that it refers to a racial-cultural group or groups, in much the same way that Hispanic or Basque would be capitalized.

While all organizations, both active and inactive, are cited in the Alphabetical Index, only groups known to be currently active are referenced in the Geographical, Racial-Ethnic, and Functional Indices.

4. To make a more interesting publication, some organizational logos are used in the directory section and some pictures are used throughout the book. With a few exceptions, the pictures are not related to any specific organization and should not be construed as illustrating the activities of the groups cited near them.

5. Many organizations provided such general information on their activities, that only very general descriptions could be presented. Some, for example, avoid citing in their purposes and other literature the fact that they were founded by or for minority group members.

6. The name changes in groups made it difficult to trace their development. For example, the Association of Filipino Practicing Attorneys in New York City (known to be active now) may or may not have been the Association of Philippine Lawyers (last identified as being located on nearby Staten Island).

   As pointed out in the section on Sources of Information for the Directory, research for this publication began in the early 1970's. Numerous name and/or address changes over this period attest to the difficulty in keeping track of these organizations.

7. Native American groups present a special classification dilemma. At issue is the question of whether to cite their nation or tribal group or the reservation where they live now or where their tribal council is located. In many cases, members of several tribes have been merged on reservations, so citing reservations minimizes tribal identities. This directory tends to list reservations as many tribes have no other address than that of a reservation or this is the most permanent address available.

8. Finally, this second national directory obviously omits many organizations not yet identified by its editors. Readers are invited to communicate with "The Editor, Minority Organizations Directory, Garrett Park Press, Garrett Park, Maryland 20896," calling to our attention new organizations or changes which should be made in existing organizations.

   This directory is scheduled to be updated and expanded at approximately three-year intervals. Thus, reader feedback and assistance is particularly sought.

HISTORICAL ROLE OF MINORITY ORGANIZATIONS

In a society which is growing in complexity and in which voices speak on all sides of issues, minority organizations have become increasingly important. Their role in pressing for employment, education, housing, and other Constitutional rights is well known and reflects the contribution of groups with a racial/ethnic orientation.

One authority estimates that since 1929 the number of all national organizations, not just minority, has grown from 500 to 13,000. Likewise, looking at the dates when many minority organizations were founded, one notes a very high percentage which have yet to celebrate their 10th anniversary.

While there are a number of general minority organizations, as listed in this directory, many groups draw their membership or base their area of service upon a single racial/ethnic group. A brief look at their role in history provides a clearer perspective on these organizations today.

Native American

While minorities have been a part of the American culture since the first European settlers arrived and, indeed, were on the shores watching as their boats docked, highly-organized minority groups are a fairly recent phenomenon.

The major exception, of course, is seen in Native American organizations. Linked by unique language, customs, and (until recently) by geography, American Indian tribes or nations were firmly established long before they saw their first European settlers. All during the westward expansion and seizure of Indian lands, which occurred in the 1700's and 1800's, United States military and civilian leaders made full use of Indian governing bodies. This, of course, served the interests of the United States government.

Driven from their lands, often moved to an alien part of the country, and regimented into military-run reservations, it is a miracle that much of the Indian tradition survived. Yet, a hundred years after many of these events took place, Indian organizations remain strong and clearly defined.

By the early part of this century, United States policy toward the Indians began to change. The Indian Reorganization Act of the 1930's established the right of tribes to incorporate with the US Government, and most of them did so. Today, the civilian-run Federal Bureau of Indian Affairs recognizes 278 American Indian tribes, bands, or other groups and over 200 Alaska Native organizations or communities.

In recent years, tribal groups have banded together to help gain more power through concerted action. Some of these main federations include the All-Pueblo Council (in the Southwest), the United Sioux Tribes (in the Dakotas), and the United Southeast Tribes (in the Southeast).

The struggle of Indians for their rights has attracted a number of non-Indians to their cause. Some of the key national groups accept non-Indians into a membership status including the Indian Rights Association, the Association on American Indian Affairs, and the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI). The NCAI is one of several Native American groups which maintains an office in Washington to audit legislative and executive actions. It established this office at the end of World War II.

Alaska Natives have come in for increased attention, with the advent of the Alaska pipeline and its resulting financial implications. A series of organizations were funded as a result of the Alaska Native Claims Act of the early 1970's. Using funds generated from oil revenues, support was provided for a number of Native Alaskan nonprofit, economic development corporations. Most are organized along geographical or regional lines. Within Alaska, Native Americans are classed into three groups which include the Aleuts, Eskimos, and Indians.

Black

Among Black organizations are a number which stemmed from the era when majority-dominated professional associations refused to admit Black members. The oldest Black health group, the Medico-Chirugical Society, was founded in the District of Columbia in 1884. Many used the term "National" in their title, to distinguish them from the other organizations, which often used "American." Thus, the Black-oriented National Medical Association and the National Dental Association co-exist today with the general American Medical Association and the American Dental Association.

When these and other general groups began to admit Black members, some minority organizations elected to merge with them. In 1951, for example, the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses voted to disband as a factor toward integration in its field. Later, when the new role of minority groups became clear, Black nursing organizations developed again.

Other Black organizations began in this period in which membership in a majority organization was generally open to them, but a special emphasis group was desired. Illustrative are the fairly recently-formed American Tennis Association and the Caucus of Black Sociologists. Similarly, Black fraternities and sororities have, in general, elected to maintain their unique status. Alpha Phi Alpha was the first Black fraternity, organized in 1906.

Obviously, Black organizations are closely related to the struggle for civil rights. One of the oldest organizations, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) began in 1909. It was formed on Lincoln's birthday, in that year, following the tragic lynching of a Black man in Lincoln's home town of Springfield, Illinois. Long before it had much help from white liberals, the NAACP began the long, slow process of seeking equal justice.

In the 1950's, the NAACP was joined by other groups, such as the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) which had been established in 1942 and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which Martin Luther King, Jr. led from its founding in 1957 to his death in 1968. These organizations became known because their efforts to force more justice in the South led to sit-ins, boycotts, and the 1963 March on Washington.

Other Black efforts have stressed economics. The National Urban League, formed in 1910, has linked employment, education, housing, and civil rights together as basic needs. The first Black union of the modern era, the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, was formed in 1925 and four years later was admitted to the American Federation of Labor. Technically, the first Black labor organization was the Colored National Labor Union which lasted for a few years after its founding in 1869.

Recent efforts have stressed self-help. Illustrative is the cluster of activities which evolved from the Zion Baptist Church in Philadelphia and its dynamic pastor, Rev. Leon Sullivan. Its Opportunities Industrialization Center (OIC) proved so popular that the Department of Labor ended up funding replicas in hundreds of cities. The economic boycotts and subsequent minority hiring agreements led by Operation PUSH of the Rev. Jesse Jackson were followed by its major emphasis upon study and academic achievement as keys through which Black youth could break out of the cycle of poverty.

Hispanic

While Hispanic peoples stem from the early Spanish in the Southeast and Southwest, it was not until recent years that their organizations surfaced and received national attention.

Reflecting the economic deprivation of Hispanic America, many of its best-known organizations have a political-labor orientation. Two early groups were the Alianza Hispano Americano formed as a political action and publishing group in 1894 and El Partido Liberal Mexicano, established in Los Angeles in 1907 to press for better working conditions and for more political power. The League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) was formed in 1928 and now has chapters in Hispanic population centers all over the country. It is no coincidence that a major program effort of LULAC is the Federally-funded Operation SER which provides job training for the unemployed and underemployed.

The plight of Hispanic seasonal farm workers led to the Confederacion de Unions Obreras, organized in Los Angeles in 1927. This was the forerunner of Cesar Chavez's National Farmworker Association (1962), later to become the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee.

Other groups developed because existing organizations were not responsive to their needs. Illustrative is the American G. I. Forum, formed in 1948 by Hispanic veterans of World War II.

Some feel that the best hope for the future of minorities will come from political action. This is particularly true among the younger generation. The Mexican American Youth Organization (MAYO) formed in San Antonio in 1966 led directly to the establishment of the Raza Unida party. Formed in Texas in the early 1970's, this organization was established as an alternative to the two major political parties.

The role of minority women is always complicated as their own struggle for civil and economic rights may appear to put a damper on the broader struggle of their minority group. Thus, Hispanic women may have been concerned about the problem of launching another movement, stressing the concerns of women.

Nevertheless, Hispanic women's organizations have been active during much of this century. The Liga Faminil Mexicanista was formed in 1911 and the Liga de Defensa Escolar began in San Antonio in 1934. A major National Chicana Conference was held in Houston in 1971. Today, many local Mexican-American business and professional groups are active, such as one in Houston.

The Puerto Rican migration to the mainland is a fairly recent phenomenon (between 1940 and 1975, the number of Puerto Ricans in the States grew from 40,000 to 1,700,000) and their organizations are of rather recent vintage. Many are centered in New York and other eastern cities, the chief centers for mainland Puerto Ricans. A number of groups stress research and publication--reflecting the feeling that dissemination of information on the plight of Puerto Ricans may lead to improvements in their conditions.

As it is located only 100 miles off the coast of Florida, Cubans have had easy access to the United States for many years. The current influx of Cubans, as an aftermath of the Castro regime, has created strong Cuban organizations in the United States. Many center in the Miami area, including many professional associations "in exile."

Asian Americans

Asian Americans were the last of the minorities, included in this directory, to arrive in the United States.[1] Most can only trace their ancestry in this country for one to three generations. Furthermore, their close-knot family structure, their close proximity in housing, and their non-Western cultural heritage led to a unique closeness.

Most early immigrants from Japan and China settled in California and in the West. While the Western intrusion upon Japan in 1854 opened up contact with the United States, relatively few Japanese immigrated to the United States until after 1880. The few who did were employed on California farms. Despite the annexation of Hawaii in 1898, resulting in the addition of many Asian Americans to the United States control, hostility against Japanese and other Asian immigrants in the early 1900's led to more anti-Asian organizations on the west coast than Asian groups. This was climaxed in 1913 by a California state law prohibiting Japanese from owning farmland.

Little wonder that publically-announced Japanese American organizations were slow in developing. In 1921, the Seattle Progressive Citizens League was formed. A few years later, the American Loyalty League (and this name makes clear its intent to minimize Asian ties) was formed in Fresno. Later, this group evolved into the Japanese American Citizens League. Formed in 1930, the JACL has remained a strong and unifying group for this sector of the Asian American community.

Chinese organizations, likewise, were affected by discriminatory practices. Sought for railroad construction crews, thousands immigrated in the last part of the 19th century. However, the numbers of immigrants were cut by the passage in 1882 of the Chinese Exclusion Act and the absolute ban on immigration to the United States from 1904 to 1943.

Early Chinese immigrants were linked by family ties or by their home area in China. Family ties remain strong today. The Chinese tended to band together and most large American cities ended up with "Chinatowns." Even today, a dozen cities still cite Chinatown areas.

The Chinese-American Citizens Alliance was formed in San Francisco in 1895, as an early and publically-announced association. Several cultural linkage groups followed: the China Society of America in 1913 and the China Institute in America in 1926. Yet, the great bulk of Chinese American organizations in this period were limited to family associations, which were powerful, and to associations of Chinese merchants. More recent years have seen the establishment of such groups as the American Association of Teachers of Chinese Language and Culture (formed in 1958).

Its political association with the United States during the first part of this century led to the immigration of a number of residents from the Philippine Islands. A relatively large number of Filipino organizations were noted. These organizations are characterized by more geographical diversity than is seen in Japanese or Chinese American groups.

Its special status with the United States, and its lack of suitable jobs for all, contributes to a steady flow of temporary residents from American Samoa. Most, it has been reported, plan to work in the United States for a short time before returning home. During this period, many join Samoan organizations in the United States.

The influx of Southeast Asian refugees which marked the late 1970's and early 1980's led to the establishment of a number of Vietnamese, Lao, and Cambodian groups in the United States. Some are too new to have been picked up in the process which identifies minority organizations. Others reflect special concerns such as the National Committee Concerned with Asian Wives of U.S. Servicemen.

[1] In this directory, the term "Asian American" will be used. This seems highly preferable to "Oriental," a term which had its origin in British Colonialism. The "Orient" was coined as Southeast Asia was east of London--then considered, by many, to be the center of the earth.

ALPHABETICAL LIST OF ORGANIZATIONS

The organizations included in this directory are listed below in alphabetical order. Numbers cited refer to organizational entry number, not page number. For example, the Absentee-Shawnee is entry number 5 and appears in that order in the directory. For a number of reasons, including the fact that many names were added after the original alpha listing was typed, organizations are not always in alphabetical order in the directory--but the list below is alphabetical. As so many Native American names were included, it was decided to use a strict alphabetical listing, by letters of the alphabet as they occur, rather than to follow the usual system of listing names in alpha order. Federal agencies with minority-oriented programs are listed beginning with U.S. followed by the name of the agency, such as U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs.

2660. EDUCATIONAL TESTING SERVICE
Princeton, NJ 08540
609/921-9000

The Minority Graduate Student Locater Service was developed to aid institutions in identifying students from racial and ethnic minorities who are interested in pursuing graduate education. Students register for the service at no charge and are asked to complete a registration form which provides background information including the student's educational degree goal, geographic preference, grade-point average, etc. Graduate institutions and fellowship sponsors interested in increasing their pool of minority applicants subscribe to the Locater Service and request a listing of potential enrollees based upon various designated variables such as specific racial or ethnic background, undergraduate major, state of residence, etc. The locater file is searched and the resulting information provided to the requesting institution. The individual institutions then decide which, if any, students they wish to contact. Although this service is sponsored by the Graduate Record Examinations Board, it is not necessary to register for the GRE tests in order to apply.

TELEPHONE DIRECTORIES CHECKED

The following lists some of the directories checked to identify possible minority organizations. The list does not include a number of regional directories used to cover rural areas of many states. Each directory was checked for organizations which might be eligible by looking under the following key words:

American Indian
Asian
Black
Chicano
Chinese
Hispanic
Japanese
Korean
Native American
Minority
Spanish

The listings in the white pages were also checked under the title of the city or other geographical area involved. For example, in Chicago all listings beginning with the word "Chicago" were checked.

The yellow pages for each city were checked under the headings of "Associations" and "Social Service Organizations."

Suburban areas around major cities were also checked.

Dear Administrator:

Ten years ago, we began the complex process of developing a master file of information on minority organizations in the United States. These are defined as organizations drawing most of their membership from Black, Hispanic, Asian, or Native Americans or which provide special services to these groups.

The result of this research was the publication of Minority Organizations: A National Directory in 1978. This book cited some 3,200 organizations. The response to this book was impressive culminating in its selection as an "Outstanding Reference Book of the Year" by the Association of College and Research Libraries. Reviewers were unamious in indicating that this was the most comprehensive, single source of information on minority organizations in this country.

We are in the editorial phase of the second edition of this directory, which we think will end up with twice as many entries. We are writing now to request information on your organization to faciliate the description of its program and services. Use the enclosed green Data Request Form or, if more convenient for you, provide the same information via a letter. In addition, please send along any reports or other descriptive materials you feel will help to describe your activities or services. If your organization was included in the first edition, a copy of that writeup is enclosed.

May we take this opportunity to thank you for your cooperation in this significant endeavor. Should you have comments about the directory or suggestions regarding information about other minority organizations, please let us know.

You have our best wishes for continued success in your worthwhile endeavors.

Sincerely,

Katherine W Cole

Katherine W. Cole
Editor

PS To provide more variety in the layout of the directory, we plan to use organizational logos where they are available, as part of the presentation for each group. If you have a logo, such as displayed on your letterhead, would you please send an extra clean copy and indicate your approval to reprint in the directory.

Information Sheet on
Minority Organizations: A National Directory

What is the directory?

A comprehensive listing of national, regional, and major metropolitan area organizations with either a largely minority membership or whose prime purpose is service to the minority community. For major national groups, with chapters, a list of local affiliates will be included. The first edition listed 3,200 organizations, the second should include over 6,000.

What organizations are eligible for listing?

Institutions offering services of special interest to minority group members. However, partisian political or religious evangelical groups will not be included. Minority is defined, for purposes of this directory, as including Blacks, Hispanic, Asian Americans, and Native Americans.

When will it be published?

The second edition of the directory will be published in 1981 and a notice of its availability will be sent to all listed organizations.

Who is the editor?

The directory is edited by Katherine W. Cole. Dr. Cole is a graduate of Wilberforce University and New York University. She has taught at Allen University, University of District of Columbia, and Bowie State College. She is now Associate Professor and Coordinator of Guidance and Counseling at Bowie State. She was Executive Assistant at the American Personnel and Guidance Association and directed a project on sex role stereotyping for the National Foundation for the Improvement of Education. Dr. Cole is serving on the Board of Trustees of the American College Testing and will serve as 1981-82 President of the National Vocational Guidance Association.

Royalties from the directory will be given to the Hope Community Foundation to be used in its program of scholarships, job assistance, and housing for the residents of the East Harlem area of New York City.

Where may I obtain more information?

For more information, contact Dr. Katherine W. Cole, Editor, Minority Organizations: A National Directory, Garrett Park Press, Garrett Park, Maryland 20766.
